Apologies again to Jennifer Sawyer of Marstons Mills. After noting here last week that we'd been reporting incorrectly that she lives in West Barnstable, we did it again in our candidate roundup on the facing page.... Apologies also to the Cape & Islands chapter of the American Red Cross, the major organization behind the regional shelter drill on June 27. Although the Web version of our story was correct, a production error eliminated part of this sentence in the print edition: More than 150 turned out to participate, including 71 American Red Cross disaster action team members from the Cape Cod and Islands chapter.... Finally, an editing error omitted identifications in the 1950s picture of a class at the old Barnstable Village school. That was Edie Vonnegut, fifth from the right in the top row and Terry Karras, fourth from the right in the front row.... Recycling a place for recycling: The former American Cancer Society consignment shop on Route 6A in Barnstable Village will reopen Aug. 1 as the Cape Abilities Consignment and Thrift store. About 10 part-time jobs will be created for people with disabilities. Donations and consignments are being accepted Tuesday and Thursday from 9 a.m. to noon at 895 Mary Dunn Road; appointments are required for furniture. To learn more or for volunteer opportunities, contact 508-362-3417 or consign@CapeAbilities.org.... July 21 is jazz night at the Craigville Tabernacle in the campground, starting at 7:30. The Cape Cod Conservatory Jazz Ensemble, which laid it down at the town's Fourth of July concert in Hyannis, will perform big band favorites and contemporary tunes in Centerville for free – but your donation to the Centerville Beautification Committee is welcome.... Psst! The Highland Street Foundation has underwritten free admission to 10 Massachusetts treasures. You missed your opportunity to see the Museum of Science in Boston on the cheap (July 3), but there's still time to head up the road today (July 10) to the JFK Presidential Library & Museum in Dorchester. July 17 brings free ferry transportation to Boston's harbor islands, and you can visit Franklin Park Zoo in Dorchester on the 24th. Boston Children's Museum opens its doors for free July 31, as does Plimoth Plantation on Aug. 7. The rest of August offers Stoneham's Stone Zoo (14), Salem's Peabody-Essex Museum (21), and Boston's Museum of Fine Arts (28). The last freebie is Sept. 4 at the Springfield Museums way out west.... Twelve hundred Cape Codders will enjoy free lawn seats for the Aug. 2 TD BankNorth Pops by the Sea concert thanks to Rectrix Aerodrome Centers, Inc. at HYA, the Hyannis-based subsidiary of Rectrix Commercial Aviation Services, Inc. The tickets are available through dozens of human services agencies.... Too Late for the Listings: There's nothing fishy about the Cape Cod Mall's Tuna Fest tomorrow (July 11). It's a benefit for the Greater Boston Food Bank, which helps stock local food pantries. For a suggested donation of $5, participants can "fish" with a magnetic pole for cans of tuna with prizes attached. Three tries per customer, and there's a limit of one prize each.... One of our favorite writers on nature, human and animal, is Robert Finch. He'll join Sebastian Junger of Perfect Storm fame and other scribes July 12 at Truro Vineyards on Route 6 from 6 to 8 p.m. for a readings and music benefit for the Payomet Performing Arts Center. For tickets ($75), call 508-487-5400.... He'll set tween Twitters tweeting: Drake Bell, star of Nickelodeon's Drake and Josh Show, will sign autographs at the Cape Cod Mall July 15 from 2 to 3 p.m. Wristbands will be distributed to the first 75 fans in line beginning at 1 p.m., entitling them to a picture with Bell. Bring your own camera.
